• I have understood from the get-go what I am expected to complete as coursework, as well as what chapters to read and modules to watch per unit and problem set. However, a problem arose around the first exam in which I was dinged points for cheating because I used my cheat sheet on the exam. Granted, I understand why I lost points & why the instructor does not want us to use the cheat sheet on the exam, although the name "Cheat Sheet" gives the connotation that I can use it to my advantage on the exam. I have also heard from previous students who took this class during the regular semester (although with a different instructor) that they were allowed to use these cheat sheets on the exams. Nowhere in any lectures, nor the syllabus did it state I could not use my cheat sheet. Granted, the instructor was forgiving and gave me a way to compensate for the 0, but it was still very frustrating that I was told I was in the wrong when I never knew the expectations regarding the cheat sheet on exams.
